Lagerstrom Is Exonerated in Hauschild Case

J. J. Thum, deputy coroner, yesterday afternoon ordered the release of John C. Lagerstrom, who was held in connection with the mysterious death of Lewis A. Hauschild, lawyer of beer-runners.

Although information had been given to the state's attorney of Cook county that Hauschild on his deathbed had charged he was murdered, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Lagerstrom, who brought Hauschild wounded from Lake Marie with a story that the lawyer had shot himself by accident, had been held in the investigation which at one time penetrated as far west as Los Angeles, Cal., with no results. Underworld characters were sought there by police who hoped they might solve the mystery.

Lagerstrom has been held in the Lake county jail practically ever since the shooting. He was taken to Chicago yesterday morning by Deputy W. Stark to testify at the coroner's inquest. Lagerstrom and the officer returned yesterday afternoon, the former to get his belongings at the jail preparatory to "checking out."

"The Charm School" Pleases Throng That Filled Auditorium

Playing before a packed auditorium Monday evening the senior class of the high school presented "The Charm School" a three-act comedy, in an exceptionally delightful manner. To try to name the outstanding stars of the evening would be doing a great injustice to the other members of the cast, as every member in the play was about as perfect as could be. Richard Cass and Ada Chinn, who played the leading roles, were "great." Richard, a stern young school master, staved off the love advances of his pupil Elsie (Ada Chinn) until the final curtain, and as a love-maker, Elsie could make the most stern teacher "tumble."

Emil Lubkeman and Albert Tiffany had exceedingly difficult parts to take, and performed them wonderfully. Emil keeping the house in laughter much of the time. Ardis Grimm, the school secretary, probably had the most difficult girls' role, excepting Miss Chinn. The school's secretary, an old-fashioned girl with old-fashioned ideas. Although becoming more charming in "The Charm School" never got over her old-fashioned ideas.

Of Interest to Antioch Farmers

Timely topics and local news concerning stockmen, poultrymen, gardeners and dairymen. Edited by C. L. KUTIL

LOCAL GARDEN SHOWS PROFIT

Last spring Leslie Palmer, now a Sophomore in the Agricultural Department of the Antioch High School, started a garden project to determine just what returns one may expect from a general farm garden. His work was recently completed and after deducting the cost of man and horse labor, cost of seed and spraying material, depreciation of tools and machinery, and rent of land from his returns he found that his one acre garden brought him a profit of $62.10. As he paid himself $22.50 for labor, his total income was $84.60. This is good work for a high school lad. He states that the project has awakened a new interest in him, and he expects to continue having a well kept farm garden.

Many farmers have forsaken the garden in recent years, paying attention to larger enterprises on their farms. As a result, the housewife was forced to purchase fresh vegetables or canned goods at some considerable cost. The aggregate cost of vegetables and fruits bought during the year is a large item in the household's expense. People can cut this expense down with such gardens as Leslie Palmer's. They need not be as large, and yet if potatoes are included as was the case, one acre is not too large an area to be devoted to farm gardening.

The Value of Farm Manure

Careful experiments have shown that the fertilizing value of all farm manure is equal to $2,221,700,000 annually. That is to say, if no manures were used on our soils, the American crop would decrease over two and a quarter billion dollars in value.

Sheep manure is the most valuable, horse manure next, pig manure third and cow manure last. Thousand lbs., of live weight of hogs will produce $37.96 worth of fertilizer in one year. A thousand pound cow $29.27; a 1000 lb. horse $27.74; 1000 lbs., of sheep $26.09; and 1000 lbs., of calves $24.41. This will vary some according to the ration fed, the age of animal and the kind of bedding used. Farmers cannot afford to let farm manures go to waste. The leachings from barnyard manure are more valuable than the solid parts. Save both solid and the liquid portions of the manure. Several Antioch farmers have constructed concrete manure pits on their farms to save the leachings from the barnyard manure. When manure is wet and well packed by cattle tramping on it, it will not heat and burn, as is sometimes the case with loose horse manure. American farmers must sooner or later come to using manure pits on their farms in order to maintain the fertility of the soil. Too many farmers are still depending upon the fertility that was in the virgin soil two generations ago. Many advocate the hauling of manure direct onto the land. This is a good practice in most cases. However, never apply manure on hilly land when the ground is frozen, for as soon as the spring thaw comes much of the leachings are washed away into the valleys and join some waterways. It is advisable to apply manure direct from the barn on level fields at anytime during the year.

TRACTOR RUNS OVER BODY WHILE PLOWING

Sidney Dibble of Lake Villa met with a serious accident last Tuesday while out in the field plowing with his tractor. After working for a little while the engine started to trouble him and he shut off the power, and as he stepped down to fix it his foot slipped and struck the starting lever. Mr. Dibble fell directly under the wheel of the tractor, it passing over his entire body. At first it was thought that some bones were broken and he was rushed to the Victory Memorial hospital, where an X-ray was taken. No bones were discovered broken, but there were some very severe bruises. He was removed to his home later, where it is reported that he is doing very nicely.

lived ideas. Her quaint speech and actions helped greatly in keeping the "life" to the play.

Albert Herman and Lester Nelson and Letha LaPlant and Elma Cannon were the other members who had difficult parts and all were exceptionally well rendered. Beulah Harrison, Mildred Gallagher, Helen Cribb, Vida Palmer, Augusta Hucker and Georgia Bacon completed the cast.

Miss Esther Olson is to be complimented upon her success in her coaching of the players, as every one in the cast was well trained for their parts.

Before the performance and between the acts, the high school orchestra, under the direction of Rev. S. E. Pollock, rendered several selections that were greatly appreciated by the audience. The orchestra has been practicing but a short time and their offering was considered a success.

Gideon Thayer has also been doing a training act, as his pony was used upon the stage in the last act during a thunder and lightning storm, and "Dobblins" stood the storm without a falter.

WADSWORTH BOY SHOOTSELF IN HAND

Lester Lucas, 12 years old, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lucas, who resides near Wadsworth, shattered the nerves and muscles of his right hand Sunday when he received the full charge of his shotgun while crawling through a fence.

The shots ripped a furrow along the wrist, right at the hand, and tore away a major portion of the muscles and it is feared that some of the nerves are severed.

Dr. W. S. Bellows, who was called to dress his wounds, expressed the opinion today that the boy would not have the use of his hand for some time.

Young Lucas had been hunting. On his way home he started to crawl under a fence when his gun accidentally exploded. He was rushed to the Victory Memorial hospital where the wound was dressed. He suffered the loss of a large amount of blood.

LAKE COUNTY HORSES WIN MANY PRIZES

O. W. Lehmann Entries Are Winner of Many Ribbons

Fresh from the New York show, with quantities of cups and ribbons, Mrs. Otto W. Lehmann of Lake Villa swept the ring in the horse show at the International amphitheater Monday night.

Exciter, bred by Mrs. Lehmann's string, won first in the competition against nine other horses. Ruth Ann, owned by George Calvert, Pittsburgh, Pa., took second; Brilliant, entered by Edward J. Lehmann of Lake Villa, third, and Superlative, entered by Miss Jeanne Gilchrist, Detroit, fourth.

Mrs. Lehmann displayed unusual skill in exhibiting Exciter. He was the winner of the Biltmore challenge cup for the second time at the national show in New York last month. Now his owner retains the cup permanently.

Victory in the saddle class was the second triumph of the evening for Mrs. Lehmann's horses. One of hers, Princess Mary won the class for heavy harness horses. That mare was winner of three challenge cups at the recent Gotham exhibition.

Princess Mary last night defeated John R. Thompson's two entries, Sporting Extra and Willington Nimble. They finished second and third, respectively.

Another Lehmann entry, Royal Connaught, took fourth honor. The showing of the O. W. Lehmann stable would indicate that some keen competition may be expected by other exhibitors this week. The supremacy of this string is attested by its achievement at the New York show, where it annexed twelve blue ribbons, three champions and one reserve championship.

The class for tandems resolved itself into a local contest between horses owned by John R. Thompson, Otto W. Lehmann and William Dee. The Thompson entry, Leading Horse and Clyde Iris, was the choice of the judges for first place. Mr. Lehmann's Montpelier Corinne and Montpelier Safety placed second, with Mr. Dee's Seaton Buster and Malana, third.

The largest class of the evening was the hunters and jumpers division with twenty-nine entries. Surefire, another Lehmann entry, got first.

The Holy Scriptures "were written for our learning."

But the Bible in Completed form was not drawn up until nearly 400 years after Christ, by a church council. So the Bible, and the Bible only, could not be the basis of the religion of Christians, inasmuch as for many years the earliest Christians had no New Testament at all, and got their religion from quite another source. The Bible was intended to teach people their religion for the first time. It was written for the use of Christians, not to make people Christians. It was the church that taught; the Bible proved. God has given us the church to be our guide.

"If any man," Christ said, neglects to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." The church then teaches men their religion. The Bible is meant simply to strengthen and supplement the teaching which the church has already given them. It is the divinely inspired word of God speaking through the voice of His church.

Will the United States stop building motor cars, close up its factories and return to horse-drawn vehicles?

Absurd question. Yet there is only one alternative; if we are not to lose the economic and social benefits of motor transportation, we must supply roads upon which the power vehicles may run.

It is impossible to separate the water from the wave, the gold from the bracelet, or the track from the locomotive. It is equally impossible to separate the road from the truck, or the passenger car from the highway. They are halves of a whole; transportation is never vehicles alone, or highway alone; it is both together.

Our roads were planned and built for a means of transportation which is gone. The earliest highways were for horse riders, the stagecoach came next, after which we had the buggy and the wagon. The narrow road, the steep grade, the soft surface were all admissible for these; none of them are economic for the swift powerful motor.

We have "improved" our highways—some of them—and widened a few, but we still build a road with the idea that it will "last" but a few years, and need "constant repairs." We still build in widths predicated upon slow-moving vehicles, and we still wind our highways up hill and down dale and around devious curves because it is "easiest" and "cheapest" so to do.

That era is gone! The new one is fairly here. We must either build our roads for our modern vehicles, or scrap motor transportation. As the latter is unthinkable absurd, it seems logical to believe that the era of the wide, expensive, permanent, hard surface road is here.

Agriculture Keystone of the Nation

"It is made clear by every process of logic proof of historic fact that the wealth of a territory is not determined by the character of its people, the quality and quantity of its institutions are all dependent upon a sound and sufficient agricultural foundation."

"The man on the farm must be considered the keystone of the national arch."

—JAMES J. H.

The wealth of a territory is not determined by mere acres but by their production. It is not by the land but by the extent and character of its cultivation.

The average acreage per farm is 140 acres in this territory served with gas and electric service by this Company.

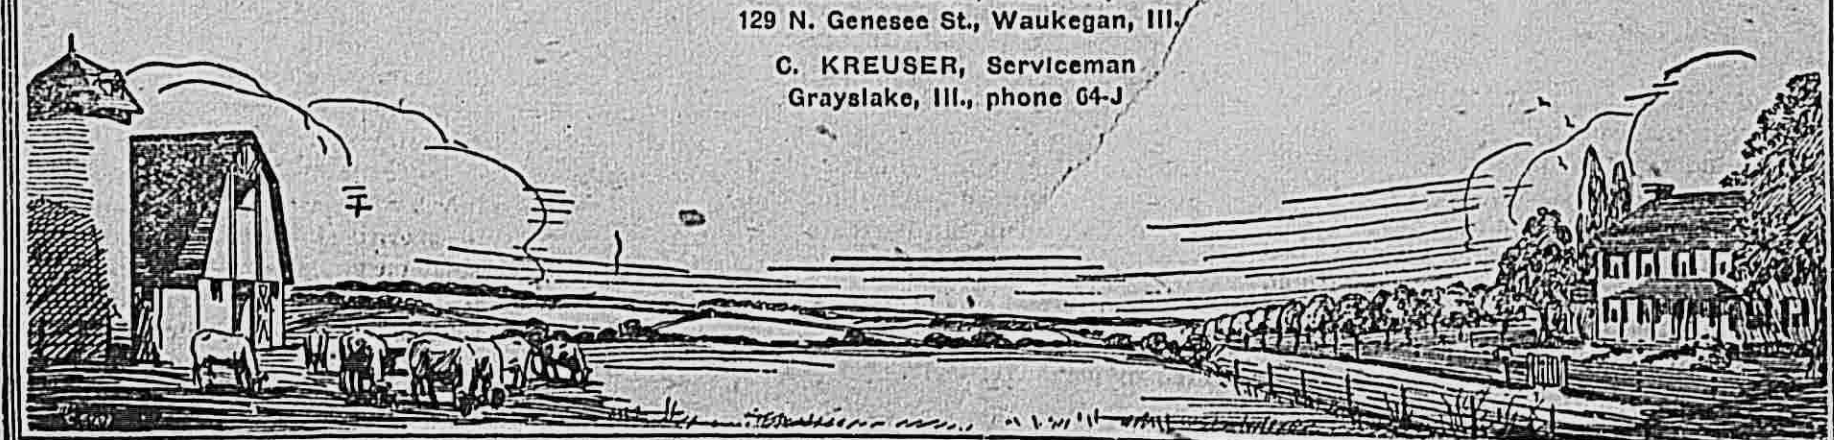

The average improved acreage per farm is 122.5 or approximately 86 per cent of the total. In such communities develop better living conditions and invite outsiders by their attractiveness.

In the growth of communities dependent upon gas and electric services are essential factors.

as though they'd sickness in the liver. It's most enough to make me cry, I get no eggs when eggs are high. My hens are housed quite well, I'll swear, to keep out snow and draughts of air, I've plastered cloth in all the cracks and filled the windows up with sacks. Each day soon after break of morn, I throw my flock a bit of corn. It's quite enough for them to eat, the Board of Trade got all my wheat. I've got no time for new ideas, for crazy notions such as these; of feeding meat scraps for protein or sprouted oats for something green. I never culled my hens last fall, I'm sure it does not pay at all for one hen looks just as good to me as any other, yes, by gee! So I can't just figure out why I get no eggs when eggs are high.

Paid Your Dues Yet?

John C. Watson, in charge of tax work for the I. A. A. figures that the savings in county taxes which will result from the work of the I. A. A. and county farm bureaus have been doing this year in equalizing valuations between town and city property and farm lands will approach $2,225,000. With the savings in the state taxes secured as the result of I. A. A. and county farm bureau action in 1921 and 1922, the total savings in taxes to farmers will amount to approximately $3,020,000 which is equivalent to about $15 in tax savings for every farm in the state of Illinois.

Not so bad, but it's merely a sample of the things that farmers can do when they get together.

SOME CROSS

A lady from Gallatin county wrote the I. A. A. that she is thoroughly sold on the new plan of inspection of farm poultry flocks and accredited hatcheries. She says she bought 100 baby chicks for Barred Rocks and when they feathered out they looked like a cross between a Leghorn and a crow.

White House Martyrs.

The strain of entertaining a nation at the White House killed four wives of presidents of the United States. They were Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Fillmore, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Wilson. The whole labor of conduct of the social life of the government falls on the president's wife, and democracy, which makes the presidential pal accessible to every respectable caller, imposes a fearful nervous strain.

With the Hughes Family to Florida

St. Andrews, Fla., Nov. 23, 1923.

Editor, News:

Sitting on the upper balcony of the bungalow that we built in sight of St. Andrews bay in the spring of 1912, in shirt sleeves, in the shade of a water oak that was so small that it was but a shrub at that time. Looking out over this beautiful sheet of placid water, I am thinking of the benefits that so many derive from it and the great Gulf of Mexico that lies just beyond. Of the men that "go down to the sea in ships" from this port.

In the two weeks we have been here this fall several large lumber steamers and sailing vessels have come in to load at the different mills that lie along its different arms. Some of them carry upward of two million feet of sawed lumber. Then there is the fishing fleets, the most of whose crews make their home in St. Andrews. Smacks that carry from one to forty tons of ice that is manufactured on the shore of the bay directly in front of our house. It has a capacity of thirty or forty tons a day of 24 hours, and often running steadily night and day.

Many of the larger fishing smacks cross the gulf to the bay of Campeche, on the Mexican coast, bringing back varying loads, but always trying to bring as many tons of fish as they carry away tons of ice. They do not always succeed, many times even making what is called a "broker," not getting fish enough to pay for the stores taken in when starting. The crew always live well when out. They "share and share alike," except that the cook and first hand divide an extra share between them, and the captain get twenty percent of the vessels forty. It is real work. Perhaps you may think that fishing is only fun. And it is when done for fun. "But men must work and women must weep."

Though storms be sudden and waters deep. And the harbor bar be moaning." We have seen more than one smack come in with the flag at half mast, and as you all know that means that some one of the crew has "crossed the bar."

The fish taken by these deep water boats are the red snapper and grouper. The snapper is the fish depended on "to pay the rent." It ships well, keeps its beautiful red color and is always in demand. These fish are caught with hook and line, only there are more than one hook on the line, generally two, and taken in water from five fathoms up to fifty. I have been out for a day with a party looking for sport, and have seen the fish through eighty feet of clear blue water fighting the hook all the way up. That was real sport. But when men are out for from 15 to 30 days it is only real work.

The "rod and reel" men who have been coming here for many years get real sport day after day. I know one man who has not missed a year in 25. He says, "This suit me, five months here and seven in Illinois." I saw a neighbor of his take 16 speckled trout from his hook on the ice plant dock in one afternoon lately. Don't have to chop any holes in the ice either. How those old Lake county fishermen would enjoy being here for a winter, especially when you can come and stay all winter for less than you can keep warm at home. The ducks, geese, robins, meadowlarks and even the bluejays know enough to come. "What fools these mortals be."—H. D. H.

AMERICAN FOODS BEST SAYS FAMOUS DOCTOR

Athens.—American standard foodstuffs are the best in the world, says Dr. Mabel Elliott, famous woman physician, who for the past two years has been medical director of American orphanages in the Near East. From the standpoint of purity and high food value, she asserts that no European nation can compete with the United States, and for this reason she insists on American products in all orphanages and hospitals, in order to meet adequately the needs of undernourished children.

Dr. Elliott's annual report, summing up the results of the care of 50,000 children in orphanages as well as clinics for 50,000 additional children in refugee camps and homes, says:

"Stable American foods are now the backbone of all our menus for rebuilding children who became weak and anemic during the refugee exodus from Asia Minor. Our menus contain, not only bread made from American flour, and corn grits in porridge and stews, but also the liberal use of corn syrup, American condensed milk and American cocoa and macaroni, thus making a balanced ration to meet all the scientific requirements as to relative food values, calories and vitamins."

The favorite orphanage pudding is composed of corn grits with cocoa, sweetened with corn syrup, and made more nutritious and palatable by adding a sauce of American condensed milk. Such a pudding has a high food value and is very economical—no other equivalent food value could be obtained from other foods at twice the cost. Moreover, it is so palatable that children eat it eagerly several times a week, and never seem to tire of it. The American people, in providing for these parentless children such pure and wholesome foods from their own tables, are certainly making a practical application of the golden rule."

Dr. Elliott has recently returned to America to arrange for the publication of a book of her experiences under the title of "Beginning Again at Ararat."

FOURTEEN NATIONS SUPPORT COVENANT

European Countries Join American President in Backing Golden Rule as Practical Program.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Officials of relief organizations from fourteen European countries have asked their governments and peoples to join in a great international movement to save the destitute orphans and widowed mothers in those countries of the Near East that have suffered from recent wars.

Dec. 2 has been set aside as "Golden Rule Sunday." On that day people will be asked to observe the broad principle of the Golden Rule by foregoing their usual noonday meal and eating instead the frugal ration usually partaken of by the parentless children of Greece, Armenia and Palestine.

The world's people will then be asked to contribute the difference in the cost of the two meals to the principal relief organization in their country, to be administered for the needy children.

Notable people in Europe who will co-operate to give the day an international aspect are King George of Greece, Prince Carl of Sweden, ex-Premier Clemenceau of France, M. Paul Hymans and Dr. Alice Masaryk.

Better Dairy Herds at Low Cost

Cooperative bull associations are helping hundreds of farmers to improve the production of their dairy cows at a low cost, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Last year these associations in the country increased 15 per cent in number, showing that they are making steady progress. In Idaho the number increased from 9 in 1922 to 29 in 1923. Records show that in these associations the bulls have greatly increased the production of daughters whose records have been compiled showed an average increase over their dams of 23.22 per cent in milk yield and 25.21 per cent in butterfat production.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

COUNTIES MATCH T. B.

REWARD OFFER OF I. A. A.

According to word received by the Lake County Farm Bureau from the Illinois Agricultural Association, six counties have matched the $100 reward offer of the I. A. A. for conviction of the first offender of laws and regulations forbidding the trafficking of tuberculous cattle within the county. These counties are Whiteside, DuPage, Will, Rock Island and Kane.

Several other counties have stated their intention of accepting the offer of the I. A. A. but have not taken formal action.

Local associations for the purpose of carrying out a program of cleanup have been formed in Whiteside, McHenry, DuPage, Cook, Lake and Boone counties.

M. H. Peterson, Lake county, is assisting in the work of the I. A. A.

ACCOUNTANT AND FINANCE

EXPERT ENGAGED BY I. A. A.

Of interest to members of farmer's cooperative associations in Lake county is the fact that the Illinois Agricultural Association has employed Mr. Frazer of Chicago as consulting accountant and financial adviser. He will be at the call of Illinois farmers for advisory service along business lines.

Mr. Frazer was professor of public accounting and comptroller at the University of Illinois from 1913 to 1915; he devised the Illinois state financial system in 1917; and was assistant director of finance for the United States government in 1916.

In engaging Mr. Frazer, the I. A. A. is recognizing the need for more knowledge on the technical side of finance and accounting problems of cooperative marketing associations.

I. A. A. Investigating Co-op. Poultry and Egg Marketing Associations. Word comes to the Lake County Farm Bureau that the Illinois Agricultural Association is making an investigation of successful cooperative poultry and egg marketing associations in the western part of the United States through J. D. Harper, in charge of poultry and egg marketing work for the I. A. A.

Writing from Salt Lake City, Utah, Mr. Harper says: "In March of this year the Utah farm bureau organized the Utah Poultry Producers, a cooperative association. So far this year they have sold 127 cars of eggs and expect to sell 160 cars by the end of the year. In contrast to this, Utah shipped out only 17 cars of eggs in 1922 and imported seven cars."

These eggs are sold under the brand "Milk White Eggs," are well graded and packed by quality. Mr. Harper says. Eggs sold as low as five cents per dozen in Utah in 1922. A few weeks ago a car of Utah eggs sold on the New York market for $1,475 more than a car of the famous Petaluma, Cal., "Newlaid" eggs brought on the same day.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to thank the neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness and assistance during our recent bereavement.
Mr. John Drury and family.

On many occasions subscribers and readers of The Antioch News stop at our office and ask how much it costs to print a social or local news item. They have out-of-town guests visit them and would like to make mention of it. Or perhaps the reader has been away on a visit and upon returning wishes a note made of his (or her) trip.

All these items the social editor most gladly receives and there is NO CHARGE under any circumstances.

The only items where a charge is made is where an affair is held and the person or persons concerned receives cash value, such as announcing card parties, where an admission is charged, or a bazaar or entertainment, basket social, dance or other announcements which are held for financial purposes, then a charge of 25c is made up to and including five lines. Each additional line 5c.

If you have any news items or social items that you wish published or any news items that will be of interest to our readers, please call Miss Davis. THERE IS NO CHARGE.

Cow Testing Pays, Records Show

That cow testing pays substantial returns is shown conclusively by records for five years compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. In three well-managed associations in Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania the average butterfat production per cow has increased noticeably every year. The first year the average production of butterfat was 237 pounds; second year, 255 pounds, third year, 278; fourth, 305 pounds. At the end of the period the average cow in these associations was yielding 68 more pounds of fat than the average at the beginning of the testing. At 40 cents a pound this increase of fat would have a value of $27.20 per cow, and a herd of 20 cows would bring in $544 more than at the beginning.

Creeds Creedalism

(First of a series of studies in Creedalism and the Apostles' creed.)

I am facing the possibility of being misunderstood when I start a study of the Apostles' creed, but every one who has ever started anything has been obliged to dare misunderstanding. Never before have I dared to do what I am going to do now mainly because I never trusted myself. I was afraid I had not the tact required. I felt the need of studying more before I began to teach. But now the attempt must be made. If I shall flinch now from giving to the world the high faith which I have received from those who occupy positions of leadership in the church, for fear of what folks may say, I am a traitor to what I have been privileged to receive.

It is perfectly evident that the church of Christ needs a new fresh grip upon the world. People are religious but many of them are out of the body of the organized churches. One reason is, I know from experience, that many of them feel that our attitude toward creeds is medieval, and they are out of sympathy with our statement of faith. This has been so apparent that the present task has been thrust upon me of restudying the creeds in the light of our modern thinking in other fields. We ought not to fear such a course, but we do shrink from touching statements of religious conviction, because of the fact that many people scarcely see the distinction between the facts of religion, and the statement of those facts. The facts and instinct and hungers are eternal, but the statements of them will, and ought to, vary and grow with every age. It is fear that has led us to shrink from a change. Before we are done, we shall see that our modern emphases in religion are not exactly the same as those expressed in the Apostles' creed. We shall make a study of the life and teachings of Jesus, and come to an appreciation of the unique contribution which he made to the world. And I shall then ask you to take your choice between His emphasis and the emphasis of the Creeds. I never stopped using the Apostles' creed in the public worship until I had long since found a better statement of the religion of Jesus. So I am asking those who start this course of study not to judge me, or what I think until you know, and you will not know what I think until I am thru. This may not be easy to do—but it is worth while, and I am not hunting for anything easy.

Saturday, at a conference of religious leaders at Zion City, three papers were read upon phases of activity in community churches. Afterwards, when discussion was opened, I said that two of the papers had missed the crux of the whole purpose for them—They had dealt with how to perpetuate those kinds of churches. I said I was not interested in seeing those kind or any kind of churches perpetuated. Just the same I am not interested in seeing Christianity perpetuated, or in having it saved. I haven't time for such worries. I am interested in seeing those churches save the communities, and in seeing Christianity save the world. If we must worry about a church being saved or about Christianity being saved, at just that time that church and that kind of Christianity is not worth saving. A lot had been said about the creeds of these churches. I volunteered that the thing which justified these churches in any community was not their creeds, but their ministry to the needs of the community. The chairman arose and said that a church needed a creed, and had one. I objected that the creed that expressed the service motive of the ordinary church was not the same as the creed which it required of those who were to unite with it. And when the chairman then replied that our churches ought then to make the creed we repeat identical with the creed which we practise, I could utter a hearty Amen. We do need a creed, if by creed you mean the expression of our faith. Dr. E. E. Tittle of the First M. E. church, Evanston, in a sermon entitled, "Does it make any difference what we believe. Our real creed determines our deed. But people are shrewd enough to see that, in the case of many of us, it does not make a red cent's worth of difference what we profess to believe. The creed we live by is something different. Our neighbors, therefore, have learned to judge us by our practices rather than by our professions." The purpose of the study we are to take up is just to indicate how our real faith as indicated by our practices is different than the faith expressed in the Apostles' creed.

I have had people express surprise when I told them that the Apostles' Creed was not the creed of the Apostles. It was in the process of being formulated during the ages following the times of the Apostles, but it was not put into its present form until after the council of Nicea at which council the Nicene creed was finally moulded, upon which creed our present creed is based. If, or when, we study the times of the first Apostles, we shall see that they believed somewhat differently than the people who formed this creed. It will be illuminating to take a look at the council which decided what the church must believe. There had been a great deal of hard feelings in high church circles before this date, between different factions which had differences of belief as to some of the points of doctrine. This condition had almost led to the disrupting of the Empire. The faction gaining a temporary control would banish their enemies of a different opinion, or hire some thug to poison or murder them. Things were at a bad state. The Emperor Constantine decided to make a band. It is often wrongly supposed that he was a Christian Emperor. He may have been as Christian as many of the religious leaders, but that is not saying much. He did nominally embrace Christianity, and called himself a Christian, but he would not be baptized until in his old age he thought he were dying, because while he lived he was unwilling to bind himself to a religious life which such a baptism would bind him to live. Now he called the warring religious factions together and told them that they must stay there until they had come to some kind of an agreement, and that what ever they decided upon he would enforce. He had no opinions on the matter, he merely wanted peace in the empire. He was a good politician. No conference, of a secular nature ever was held at which there was more rotten politics employed, or more hatred evinced than was the case at the council of Nicea. And when as the result of wire pulling, and the manipulation of influence, an agreement was reached, the Emperor forced it upon his Empire, and we have been willing to take such an agreement as the voice of God, and to leave ourselves under the dominance of such a non-religious tyranny. I do not say that the creed is all bad. It is full of truths of eternal significance, or it would not have found such a loyal support among Christians, as it has found, but I do say in all confidence, that it does not express exactly, the Faith of Jesus, nor does it express the religious passion of our own day, nor does it meet our needs. This course of study will lead us to a study of the very fundamentals of our faith, in which we shall discover a more Christlike and more vital basis for a dynamic religious life.

And we shall study fearlessly, accepting the stewardship of our intellects—that God who gave them to us expected us to use them. We shall claim for ourselves the opportunity which Chancellor Flint of Syracuse University beseeches for the university: He says, "A university must give an opportunity to search for truth without hypocrisy and without flinching, recognize that God's universe is fireproof, and it is safe to strike a match" (extract from inaugural address, Nov. 17, 1922.) We do not want to go back to the old world to live. We will go back to it for instruction. But we will remember that it is going against God's way of doing things when we try to stop progress, and fix things. The first law in God's universe is the law of change, and progress.

"The garden bed I wandered by, one bright and cheerful morn, When I found a new-fledged butterfly a-sitting on a thorn, A black and crimson butterfly all doleful and forlorn. "I thought that life could hold no sting to infant butterflies. So I gazed on this unhappy thing with wonder and surprise, While sadly with his waving wings he wiped his weeping eyes. "Said I, 'What can the matter be? Why weepest thou so sore With garden affair and sunshine free and flowers in goodly store? But he only turned away from me and burst into a roar. "Cried he, 'My legs are thin and few where once I had a swarm, Soft fuzzy fur a joy to view once kept my body warm, Before these flapping wing things grew to hamper and deform. "At that outrageous bug I shot the fury of mine eye. Said I with scorn all burning hot, in rage and anger high, 'You ignominious idiot, those things were made to fly' "I do not want to fly', said he, 'I only want to squirm.' And he dropped his wings dejectedly and still his voice was firm, "O yesterday of unknown lack, today of unknown bliss; I left my fool of red and black; the last I saw was this, The creature madly climbing back into his chrysalis."

I shall make mistakes, because I am human, but I shall be faced forward. E. Lester Stanton.

HUMAN POLAR BEARS IN "LITTLE OLD NEW YORK"

The courage to jump into the icy waters of the Hudson River on cold day during the filming of the picture was the qualification that won three members of the Polar Bear Club of oney Island an opportunity to appear with Marion Davies in her Cosmopolitan production, "Little Old New York," which Manager P. E. Chinn has booked for the New Crystal theatre on Dec. 9-10-11—Three days.

In the picturization of Rida Johnson Young's famous stage play, one of the big scenes shows a replica of Robert Fulton's first steamship, the Clermont, as it rides up the Hudson. In this scene a summer atmosphere is maintained in accordance with the story. In one part of the scene three of the characters jump overboard and frolic in the waters of the Hudson.

Before this scene could be filmed it was necessary to find three actors who had little fear of an ice cold ducking. They were eventually found amongst the ranks of the oney Island Polar Bears who take a dip every day during the winter. Eddie Neely, Walter Pine and Joseph Monomo are the three Polar Bears who appear in this scene in the picture. While the scene was "shot" they showed no hesitation about diving into the icy water, the while other members of the company had difficulty in keeping their teeth from chattering.

The Custard Cup

by
Florence Bingham Livingston

COPYRIGHT BY GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Living in a barn, converted into a dwelling, Mrs. Penfield is manager of an apartment building known as the "Custard Cup," originally "Cloister Court." Her income is derived from laundry work, her chief patron being a Mrs. Horadus Weatherstone, whom she has never seen, living with her are "Crink" and "Thad," homeless small boys whom she has adopted. They call her "Penzie." Thad tells Penzie a strange man was inquiring for her under her maiden name.

CHAPTER II.—A tenant, Mrs. Gussie Bosley, induces Penzie to take charge of a package, which she does with some misgivings.

CHAPTER III.—Searching a refuse dump for things which might be of value, Crink, veteran at the game, encounters a small girl, Lettie, who proves a foeman worthy of his steel. He takes her to Penzie, and Lettie is adopted into the family.

CHAPTER IV.—The stranger proves to be Mrs. Penfield's uncle Jerry. He announces he is going to remain in the vicinity of The Custard Cup.

CHAPTER V.—Uncle Jerry arranges to occupy the loft above Mrs. Penfield's studio.

CHAPTER VI.—Uncle Jerry meets Prudence Hespood, no longer young, but attractive, and the two appear to "hit it off" well. Lorena Percy, young friend of Penzie, tells her of her engagement to Dick Chase, also a mutual friend.

CHAPTER VII

What Can You See in Him?

Lettie was in the midst of a financial enterprise. Mrs. Catterbox, a leader in penny prodigality, had offered the job of watching her two children till dinner time, at one cent per head. Lettie had not only accepted, but had used this as a lever with which to pry off further gain. Whatever other qualities might be debatable or in abeyance, Lettie's trustworthiness was generally conceded. Successfully, therefore, she had interviewed three mothers, until she had assembled nine youngsters in the driveway, each representing a cash value of one cent. When Mrs. Penfield entered, they were about to be conducted to the back yard, there to be vigorously and conscientiously entertained for an hour.

"We're going to play animals," announced Lettie, vastly excited.

"Animals?"

"Uh-huh. Out of that library book you been reading us."

"Lettie," called Mrs. Penfield, as the child danced away, "remember not to play too hard. You're big and strong compared with—"

Lettie prouetted momentarily while she quitted this misgiving. "Huh, trust me! It's just little animals we're going to play."

Mrs. Penfield went on into the house. Uncle Jerry was there before her; also Frank Bosley.

"I thought you wouldn't mind, Carline, if we walked into your living-room for a minute."

She nodded pleasantly. "You're perfectly welcome. The words were hospitable, but not so cordial as Mrs. Penfield herself could have wished. She could not entirely conquer a feeling of irritation upon finding in her house a man whom she instinctively distrusted. A foolish feeling, she thought to herself. She had not a shred of tangible evidence against Frank Bosley, but the repulsion was strong. Her delight in finding a relative here in California had been greatly tempered by the friendship between these two men, unaccountable, persistent.

"Don't hurry because I came," she said, waving the guest back to his seat. "I'm going on into the kitchen in a minute." She opened her shabby leather bag and took out a small box, wrapped in paper. "I'll just give you this, as long as you're home again." She passed it over.

Frank Bosley took the box mechanically and turned it about as if bewildered. "What is it?" There was no doubting his surprise.

"I'm sure I don't know. Valuable, I s'pose. Your wife brought it for me to keep while she was gone."

The red of swift anger surged into his face. "Gussie brought it in! What in h—l'd she do that for?"

Mrs. Penfield smiled. "I don't know. For safety, was all she said. And of course a burglar would be rather low in his mind 'fore he'd try this place."

His anger mounted steadily, blazing now in his prominent eyes. "D—n! She makes me sick, always getting the jumping jimmies! I'll see that she doesn't bother you any more, Mrs. Penfield."

"Oh, 'tisn't that I count it a bother, Mr. Bosley; but, land, there ain't any great protection here."

"And, great Scott, you carry this!" he turned the box over in his hands—"these rings—or whatever 'tis—'round with you when you go anywhere?"

"No, I hain't never done that before, but going out of The Custard Cup altogether—And even so, what if I lost it?"

"I should say!" His words cut the air with violence. "Believe me, I'll fix this!"

Jerry Winston, whose merry eyes had sharpened with alert interest, broke in with a careful drawl. "Ain't you a bit hard on nerves, Bosley? Likely your wife's had a dream or something."

This lightened version seemed to restore Frank Bosley's composure. "Likely," he agreed glibly. "Been reading the newspapers, I presume. Got her mind full of robberies, and thinks she's going to be the next in line."

Jerry Winston nodded. "Worst thing in the world for nerves," he said sadly. "Women need lighter food'n that."

Mrs. Penfield started for the kitchen. Frank Bosley's voice followed her.

"I'll be ambling along, Winston. See you again in a day or two."

Mrs. Penfield, emptying the baked beans into the saucepan, shook his head. "Wouldn't that beat you?" she murmured.

She put the saucepan on the stove and went to the back door. Lettie's game was in full swing. There were now ten scraps of humanity, because Thad had been annexed to the party as a family courtesy and was traveling deadhead through its joys. Each one of the ten had been assigned the part of a creature of feathers or fur and was practicing the new character with voliferous spirit. Timmy Catterbox, as Gray Squirrel, was eating an imaginary nut with increasing grace, to the accompaniment of appropriate noises; his little sister, as Hen, was strutting and cackling in a way that would have been illuminating to untrained poultry. Rabbit was represented; also Cat and Dog and Mouse and several others—all small, as Lettie had promised; all active, as one might expect.

Mrs. Penfield, satisfied by her moment of supervision, went back to her supper preparations and the ironing which further utilized the supper fire.

Uncle Jerry tramped through the living-room and paused on his way through the kitchen. Mrs. Penfield was far from understanding why he had come into her home. It had seemed natural enough at first, but the supposition that he wanted to participate in the home life of his own kindred was being rapidly dissipated. He had fitted up the loft with a few pieces of plain furniture and had constructed a reasonable sort of stepladder that made it easily accessible; but Mrs. Penfield was beginning to wonder why he had taken the trouble. He rarely had a meal at Number 47; there were days at a time when The Custard Cup never saw him at all.

Nevertheless, when he came breezily back, bringing some offering of food which he ostentatiously claimed to have secured at a tremendous bargain, brimming with stories of the Oregon woods that delighted the children, full of rough but jolly kindness—then Mrs. Penfield appreciated him without reserve. But there were other times—times when reticence was uppermost, about his absences, his business, his companions. Then she was puzzled and disturbed, even plucked.

"Well, Carline," he began, "I didn't know you had a safety vault for the neighbors. That's 'bout the last thing I'd expect you to start."

She said nothing.

"Mrs. Bosley must have the fidgets," he continued; and as his tone grew frazier his eyes grew keener. "Say, wasn't he mad? I'll bet they've had trouble over that box. It was a box, wasn't it? Does she always bring the same package?"

Mrs. Penfield, testing the heat of the irons, turned in astonishment. "My goodness, Uncle Jerry, how'd it come to intrust you so?"

He shrugged. "Just making conversation. Hain't nothing else happened to talk about."

"That's so, too," she agreed. "Well, no, 'tain't always the same package. Sometimes it's thin and soft. I guess she's got different ways of salting down her jewels. Why, are you going off again? I thought maybe you'd have supper with us tonight."

"Can't, Carline. Sorry, but I got to see a man. Heavens, what's going on in your yard?"

Mrs. Penfield explained. She had to lift her voice, because Uncle Jerry had opened the door, and the game, now at its most vocal stage, filled the air with diverse calls and squeaks and clucks. Jerry Winston's footsteps on the board walk that ran around the house were lost in the din.

The animal game was drawing nearer. A zealous participant had discovered his habitat to be in the tree that overhung the lean-to kitchen. By the squeaky calls it was Gray Squirrel. Also, Gray Squirrels leap from branch to branch. Mrs. Penfield set down her iron and started for the door, with the intention of curbing the hazardous realism, when Crash—

"The squirrel came hurtling through the thin roof."

Splash—Gray Squirrel came hurtling through the thin roof between two supports and landed in a tub of soaking clothes. During the descent he instantaneously forsook the cluckings of the wild and shot out his furry personality as the parachute drops from the balloon. He became all at once a human baby, full of human shrieks and screams, bent on airing his troubles to a listening neighborhood.

"My goodness land!" Mrs. Penfield made a dive for the floundering, yelling Timmy and extracted him as lightly and swiftly as if he had been a breadcrumb on the tablecloth. On the instant a mob of children poured into the kitchen, not so much actuated by fear as eager to obtain choice posts of observation from which the downfall of Timmy might be fully enjoyed. Shakespeare knew what he was about when he wrote tragedy for the delight of audiences.

Lettie stormed through her group of followers, as a tornado plows its way through a populous landscape.

"By jimmies!" she shouted. "Wouldn't that jiggle your pins? There goes one cent. I won't never get paid for Timmy."

"Lettie, get me the blanket off my bed. And hurry! Hush, Timmy, dear; you ain't hurt a speck. We'll have you warm and dry in no time." With the protesting Timmy in one arm, Mrs. Penfield rummaged in the cupboard for towels.

Lettie switched back with the blanket, her resentment flaming higher than ever. She snapped her teeth at Timmy.

"You little stupid! Don't you know a roof's to keep you out, 'stead of leaking you in? By jingoes, s'pose Mrs. Catterbox won't pay me for Susie, either. That makes two cents gone. Ain't that luck?"

"Lettie, be still. Stop thinking 'bout money when you 'most broke a feller's neck. Now clear out, children. Land, if I wasn't so busy, I'd spank every one of you for enjoying yourselves 'cause Timmy here fell into misfortune. Step lively. I got to have elbow room—and sudden."

The company, thus explicitly unwanted, intimated a fade-out. Lettie snatched them vigorously.

"Run along, babies," she commanded. "You're going to play hop-scotch in the driveway—darned if you ain't! I'm going to have that seven cents or bust." She turned back and stuck her nose into the kitchen. "Say, Penzie, what you going to do with him?"

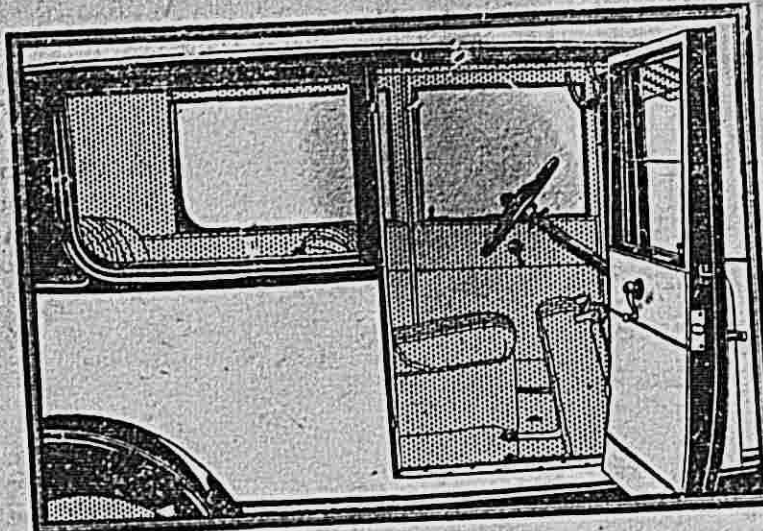

A scornful twirl of her thumb indicated the suffering Timmy.

"Dry him out," replied Mrs. Penfield tersely. "We can't return him tonight, soaked. I expected to iron tonight, but I didn't s'pose it'd be Timmy. And now, Lettie, you remember to keep all them kids on the ground. Moreover, you'll have a quiet little talk when things clear up a bit."

"Yes'm," Lettie gulped from the depths of a great comprehension; then flew to the pursuit of whatever pennies remained.

A WORD TO THE WISE

I AM WORRIED—and I am not going to be a bit backward about laying my cards right out upon the table and telling you just why.
I must raise $25,000 in cash by the 25th of December if I expect to be in business by the first of next year. I realize that in order to do that, my merchandise will have to be priced so low as to make people think that my competitors are the rankest of profiteers, but it is a matter of URGENT NECESSITY and SELF-PRESERVATION must shove business courtesy by the board.
My only satisfaction will be in the knowledge that the people of Lake County who have stood by me so well in the past will directly benefit from this GREAT HOLOCAUST OF VALUES. And it will not be amiss to state here that the Roy standard of quality will reign uppermost during this sale, just as it has during the 10 years that I have been in business in Waukegan.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE LICENSE FEES?

Motor Car Registration Pays For Good Roads

Forty-eight states collected $152,387,023 in 1922 as receipts from automobile license fees. The cost of collection, the cost of the plates themselves, and other expenses was less than four million dollars, so that a total of $148,750,000 was left as the net receipts to be spent on highways.

This sum is divided into appropriations for state highway departments, 16 millions; Federal aid funds, 34 millions; maintenance of Federal aid roads, 32 millions; construction of other than Federal aid roads, 6½ millions; maintenance of other than Federal aid roads, 21½ millions; and given as aid to counties, 25½ millions.

New Hampshire collects the largest revenue per individual car or truck, getting an average of $25.73 each, while Arizona is easiest upon car owners from the license standpoint obtaining but $5.69 each.

Electricity Serving

Public Service and Community Growth

Adequate electric service is a strong community asset. It insures comforts and conveniences to householders and dependable power to industry.

This Company is constantly extending its facilities and keeping pace with local development so that a continuously larger number of customers may be served and communities made more attractive to outsiders.

The Public Service Company furnishes services of a nature so necessary to the agricultural, industrial and residential development of the territory served by it that the prosperity and future growth of Northern Illinois and the Company are inter-dependent.

The Public Service Company is nature so essential to resident cultural development of this growth of Northern Illinois inter-dependent.

175,693,000 in Farm Buildings

VISITORS to Chicago gaze admiringly at the White Building, with its white tower silhouetted against the sky. Erected at vast expense, this building stands as a monument to progress. Just mental progress, you will gain an idea of the value of farm buildings in this territory served with electricity by this Company.

The farm buildings in this territory are valued at $175,693,000, an amount equal to the combined capitalization of the eastern national banks.

This vast investment in buildings is indicative of great agricultural wealth. With other natural resources, this area is back of the best of the Company.

The Public Service Company furnishes services of a nature so essential to the agricultural, industrial and residential development of this territory that the prosperity and future growth of Northern Illinois and the Company are largely inter-dependent.

Following Industrial Centers Attract Industry

THE Metropolitan District extending southward from the Waukegan manufacturing center and including sections of Lake, McHenry, Kane, Kankakee, DuPage, Kendall, Will, Grundy and Cook Counties is one of the most important industrial areas in the United States. Industry has had to turn to it, because of the tremendously rapid growth of Chicago with its accompanying problems of housing, schooling and decreasing amount of industrial space. Each year more plants are moved into this territory where shipping facilities are so exceptional, where space is cheaper and power service adequate and dependable and very important, where living conditions are better.

During the last ten years this territory increased in population 76.3 per cent. Embracing within it, countless industrial activities, vast mineral deposits, great stretches of fertile fields and attractive residential sections, this territory offers opportunities for business and home building, unequalled probably by any similar size area in the United States.

In keeping with this territory's growth, this Company is constantly increasing its facilities so that the capacity of our gas and electric services will be equal at all times to the demands of both residential and industrial customers.

"It is made clear by every process of logic and by proof of historic fact that the wealth of a nation, the character of its people, the quality and permanence of its institutions are all dependent upon a sound and sufficient agricultural foundation."

Where Dairying Reaches Peak Production

"All babies need me,
All parents bless me,
All mankind has me,
I am the substance of life,
I am the energy and growth,
I am the Foster-Mother of Man—
I am the Dairy Cow."

THE territory served with gas and electricity by this Company is unsurpassed for dairying.

On the farms of this area are 299,100 dairy cows with an annual milk production of 820,325,612 pounds.

This is over 400,000 tons, or more than seven times the gross tonnage of the Lehigh Valley, the largest steamship in the world.

The total value of the dairy cows in this area as given in the 1920 Census Reports was $16,072,000 and the value of dairy products $23,157,525.

In the varied activities of our national life there is none more important to our health and welfare than dairying.

The dairy cow is Man's Foster Mother, giving her precious yield to build up our bodies and the minds of those who must carry this nation on to continued greatness.

This vast amount of money represented in the dairy industry in this territory is indicative of the great agricultural wealth which with other natural resources are back of the securities of this Company.
